

Taylor and Hella Star in Modern Tragedy

Ill-Fated Lovers Meet Death in University Guild's Dramatic Presentation of 'Winterset'

In a dingy, cramped cellar apartment in a slum district of Brooklyn hides the key figure in the drama of "Winterset."

Garth Estras (Bob Leestamper) knows of the innocence of of Bartolemeo Romagna, who has been electrocuted for the murder of a paymaster. He has held this secret inside himself, not daring to tell anyone of the innocence of the executed man for fear of losing his own life.

The cellar apartment on the riverbank draws magnetically principle figures in the Romagna case. On a dark December morning, Trock Estrella (Jim Powell), a recently released convict, and his willing accomplice, Shadow (Bill Nelson), enter the dimly-lit street under the bridgehead in search of Garth. As the real killer in the hold-up, Trock would be sent back to prison if his secret were not kept. Judge Gaunt (Joe Evans), haunted by the manner in which he had handled the Romagna case, came upon the apartment in his insane wanderings.

And Mio (Herb Taylor), the son of Bartolemeo Romagna, convinced that his father has been executed unjustly, seeks Garth's testimony, which had never been called upon in court. Instead, he finds in the cellar apartment the lovely, demure young sister of Garth, Miriamne (Joann Hella.) They realize their love, but circumstances are unkind to them—as unkind as Fate has been to Mio through his entire life. The disgrace of his father's execution has nearly destroyed Mio's high ideals and ambitions.

Mio finally discovers from Judge Gaunt's mad ravings that there really has been a miscarriage of justice; that his father has been electrocuted an innocent man. If the world could be informed of this, the name of Romagna could be cleared.

Trock Estrella, however, has no desire to return to prison, nor to die for his crime. Even Shadow cannot be trusted, and dies at Trock's hand. But Mio fearlessly starts up the dark riverbank to escape with his secret. Bullets from the machine guns of Trock's men meet him, and Mio is gone.

But Miriamne knows—and falls across Mio with bullets in her heart when she makes known to Trock that justice will be done.

"Oh, Miriamne and Mio—know this where you lie, this is the glory of earth-born men (Continued on Page 4)

WINTER SPORTS TO REIGN

Gala Sno-Week Events Slated

To inaugurate a fun-packed schedule of Sno-Week activities, a button-selling campaign will get underway next Friday, followed by a basketball game Monday night, February 18, at which time UMD will play host to Concordia. The game will be played at the armory.

Hockey will be served up Tuesday night when UMD tackles the 179th Interceptor Squadron sextet. A skating party for all students will follow the game at the Curling club.

During the square dance—set for Wednesday night—the King of Sno-Week will be chosen. The King will be selected on the basis of a beard-growing contest which started last Monday.

This leads up to the Varsity show in the auditorium Thursday evening. A sparkling program will be presented, to be topped off by coronation of the Sno Queen.

Chester Bowl will be the Annual Print Show Opens

Fifty prints by artists of reputation make up the annual University of Minnesota invitational show which started Tuesday and is scheduled to run through March 2 at the Tweed Hall art galleries.

scene of Winter Sports Day activities Friday. These events include a broomball tournament in both men's and girls' divisions, and an invitational ski meet featuring teams from all colleges in this area. At present, UMD holds the traveling trophy for this event.

Climaxing the week's activities will be the gala Sno-Ball, a semi-formal dance to be held Friday night at the Spalding hotel.

Wesley Foundation Host to Conference

Wesley foundation members will be host to the state conference of the Methodist Student movement at Endion Methodist church next week. The conference will start Friday. At this time 120 students from seven Minnesota campuses will meet to discuss the theme "Does Christian Living Begin With Me?"

Stimulating students' thinking will be Dr. Samuel Nichols, pastor of the Ames Collegiate Methodist church of Ames, Iowa. This church was chosen by a Christian Century poll as one of the 12 outstanding Protestant churches in the United States.

Students Vote Today In Mock Primary

Students will have the opportunity today to indicate their choice of presidential candidates in a timely poll being conducted by the STATESMAN and the Democratic-Republican forum.

The ballot is divided into two sections. The first section lists the names of six candidates and the student is asked to vote for one. The second section pairs each Republican and Democrat against one another.

The reasons behind the balloting are numerous. The chief purposes are to give the students an opportunity to express their preferences of presidential candidates and to determine the popularity of each candidate.

The ballot is limited to those candidates the committee considered to be of major interest in this area.

The poll will be conducted on the first floor in Main.

Folk Lore Display Scheduled Tuesday

Students interested in folk lore will be interested in the dramatic display of handmade figures by Mrs. Hild Hildahl at 8 p. m. Tuesday, Feb. 12, in the Parish house of St. Paul's Episcopal church, 1710 East Superior street.

Stassen Declares Truth Can Cause Communist Collapse

By RON LEMPI

"If America asserts her affirmative and dynamic leadership of the world, using truth as her best weapon, in ten years she can cause the collapse of Communism without a world war."

Harold E. Stassen, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, made this prophecy before a capacity audience at a UMD convocation last Tuesday.

UMD Debate Team Leaves for Meet

Four members of the UMD debate squad travel to Moorhead today and tomorrow for their first inter-collegiate debate tournament of the season.

Representatives of the UMD squad who will debate at the Red River Valley tournament at Concordia college are John Brust, Leonard Wheat, Jerry Sonosky and Jerry Christian-sen.

The team will debate the following: "Resolved: That the United States government should adopt a permanent program of price and wage controls."

Additional members of the squad are Nancy Rasche, Donna Unger, Grant Merritt, Fred Norreen and Vernon Simula.

Stassen asserted that "under the present American policy of merely containing Communism, holding the line and waiting for the dust to settle, it is inevitable that Communism gains."

Demanding a change in our domestic and foreign policies and the "whole moral tone of American government," Stassen said that any Republican would make a better president than Mr. Truman.

Yet he struck out at the "semi-isolationism" of Senator Taft as a policy which would allow Communism to gain even more rapidly than at present.

"American foreign policy must rest on an affirmation of freedom and independence for peoples throughout the world," Stassen declared. Stassen related further that with millions of people chaffing under Russian rule, the Voice of America has a "tremendous opportunity for developing resistance to Communist domination." He believes that the Voice of America program should be removed from state department control, reorganized, and enlarged ten times.

In regard to foreign economic aid, Stassen stated that "any sound program to relieve the poverty and malnutrition of the world will be backed up by the Republicans in Congress."

Leestamper Named Cadet Colonel of ROTC

Robert E. Leestamper today wears the rank of cadet colonel of UMD's Air Force ROTC unit.

Cadet Colonel Leestamper, a social studies major at UMD and a member of the Minnesota National Guard for over three years, received his appointment last week from Lt. Col. Louis J. LaBarre, professor of air science and tactics. As cadet colonel, he heads the group staff of the 225-man corps, and will lead the unit in its military activities during the current school year.

Thomas D. Sermon received appointment as cadet lieutenant colonel and will serve as group executive officer. A corporal in the Marines during World War II, he is majoring in psychology.

Appointment of Raymond L. Erickson, business and economics major, as cadet major and adjutant completes the three-man group organization.

All three cadets have been designated "distinguished military students." Sermon and Leestamper, in addition, have qualified for regular commissions in the Air Force. Leestamper is also a recipient of the Chicago Tribune award, presented annually to an outstanding third-year ROTC student.

Leadership of the group's three squadrons has also been delineated. Appointed as squadron commanders are cadet Lieutenant Colonels Ira N. Burhans, John E. Burns, and William E. Crain, while cadet Majors Reyburn R. Roulston, William C. Smith, Jr., and Herbert H. Taylor have been assigned the duties of squadron adjutants.

Squadron flight leaders include cadet Captains Frank S. Benassi, Calvin J. Borgren, Alfred S. Diehl, Jr., John H. Johnson, Robert E. Mangan, Allan W. Naslund, Lee A. Opheim, Gerald I. Reponen, and Marvin G. Wick.

Designated to be element leaders are cadet 1st Lieutenants Harry E. Brusell, Jr., Clifford M. Moran, Harold C. Myr-mel, Leslie W. Nummela, Darrell Pilipovich, and Curtis J. Warner. The following third-year men have also been appointed element leaders: 2nd Lieutenants William D. Brechlin, Bernard Dinner, Thomas M. Devney, Philip C. Eldien, Carl R. Hendrickson, Dudley Johnson, John E. Johnson, Ernest L. Marchand, John C. Morrison, Donald W. Nelson, David T. Olson and Lawrence A. Zika.

WANTED: MORE SUPPORT

A discrepancy which we noticed at the basketball game last Saturday when UMD played Gustavus Adolphus was that the band did not play the Gusties school song when their team made its appearance on the floor.

A check revealed that this was not due to a reluctance on the part of the UMD band, nor on the lack of ability, but rather, it was because the band didn't have the music.

It would seem that in the interest of inter-school relations and good sportsmanship this type of music could and should be obtained by the band or the music department.

It certainly would not be too difficult a task to send a letter to other schools in the conference in order to obtain the titles of their school songs. Let's hope this situation is corrected before the next home game is contested.

We have been highly pleased with the high school tilts that have preceded the UMD games. We would like to see a high school-college doubleheader policy in effect for all of the Bulldog home games next year.

The only trouble here is that the spirit created by the high school crowd exceeds that of the collegians. In our estimation, it is very embarrassing, particularly for the cheerleaders, to watch the high school cheerleaders receive a lot of vocal support from the fans, and then when the Bulldog game is played, our cheerleaders receive very little support.

Perhaps the trouble lies in the fact that the high school crowd is still in its adolescence while the college group is more grown-up and sophisticated. Anyway, from the standpoint of student response to the efforts of the cheerleaders, possibly the best idea would be to schedule the college games at 6:30 p. m. and the high school contest at 8:00 p. m.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Dear Editor:

Did you ever wonder, upon seeing a bearded man, what he was hiding? For surely that could be his only reason for such a breach of convention. Perhaps he has a weak chin. These always manage to come up to the rest of the face when matted with hair. Perchance he is anti-social, whiskers being the barrier to sociability that they are. (Who said anything about beardburn?)

Now don't get the impression that I'm against beard raising. On the contrary, what absorbs food dribbles better than a beard? And just look at the time saved every morning because of the shrinkage of washable area. Not to mention the shaving time saved.

Of course there are several drawbacks to this sort of disguise. The accumulation of dirt, burrs, and fleas create a very itchy surface. And when you got a itch you got to scratch. This could lead to many social errors. As everyone knows it isn't proper (just ain't nice) to distract people's attention from lectures in church, school, and clubs, by clawing at one's facial adornment. The dangers of stepping on it, catching it in doors, and getting it burned in the toaster, just make beard growing more hazardous.

Then there is the added drawback of special equipment needed by those who would let the hair grow. The mustache cup is a must, along with screened soup bowls, funnels, eyedroppers, and a fine toothed comb (for those who would be discriminating).

I would like to state right now that this essay is not against beard growing at UMD. How else would us everyday bums get by if it weren't for the present compulsory fad?

Sincerely,

Hairless Untillnow.

Dear Mr. Untillnow,

Your crop may not win you the Sno-King title, but for the sake of making Sno-Week a complete success let your whiskers grow and grow and grow.

Western Living Standards Shock Invading Reds

By LEN WHEAT

When the Russians took over Estonia in 1940 they had before them a rather extensive education in western culture. The Russians had never seen such a standard of living as they found in Estonia. New-fangled gadgets fascinated them, and Russian ignorance of western ways afforded the Estonians many opportunities to make fools of their oppressors.

Modern plumbing was completely new to the Reds. When they asked the Estonians what toilet bowls were for they were told that this modern device was designed to aid man in washing his face. The Russians eagerly complied.

Watches were particularly appealing to the Russians, who promptly bought or took all the watches on the market. After it became apparent that the supply of watches was not equal to the demand, Russian soldiers could be found walking the streets with alarm clocks in their pockets.

The Russian living standard was so low that the soldiers had no shoes. For convenience they would wrap one foot in rags and the other in straw. Then, since many of the illiterate Russians had not learned the difference between left and right, the officers would call out (in Russian): "straw, rags, straw . . ." when marching.

These are a few of the incidents related by Paul Vesterstein, former Estonian, now studying at UMD. Paul was in Estonia during the first Russian occupation of his native land, and the subsequent occupation by the Nazis.

After taking over Estonia, the Russians began a reign of terror and set up a police state. In an effort to "Russianize" Estonia whole families were deported to Siberia. "Sixty thousand people were removed in just one month," Paul states. Paul's parents and a brother were among these unfortunate victims. Only because he was visiting an uncle at the time did Paul escape the same fate.

So oppressed was life under the Communists that in 1941 when the German armies marched into Estonia they were actually hailed as liberators. "We soon found out that the main difference was in the uniforms," Paul states, "but at the time we welcomed the Nazis."

The Germans eventually retreated from Estonia, however, and most Estonians decided

Gamma Theta Phi Blood Drive Approaches National Record

By WALTER HUSEBY

The Korean Blood Drive sponsored by the Gamma Theta Phi fraternity has produced 450 pledges for blood from the students on the UMD campus, 200 of which are from ROTC. When it was known that UMD was pledging blood for Korea, we were challenged by the University of Idaho as "the bloodiest campus in the nation."

This Korean Blood Drive has been sponsored by various organizations throughout the colleges and universities in the United States. A few months ago Life magazine had a feature story on a Texas college which was pledging blood for Korea.

Thirty-nine percent of the student body of the University of Idaho pledged blood. This put them on top in the blood drive. Now that the drive has been concluded, we have found that 37 percent of UMD's students have pledged. The Gamma Theta Phi frat hopes that the student body gives full support when the mobile unit arrives on campus. The goal for which we are aiming is a percentage higher than that of the University of Idaho.

The idea for a blood drive originated on campus through Gamma Theta Phi during fall quarter. The fraternity was considering doing something for the school or for the city of Duluth, if possible. After much debate, the frat voted to sponsor a "Blood for Korea" drive which would benefit both the city and the University as well as the men in Korea.

Many members of the fraternity planned a "Blood Convocation" along with the able assistance of Bill Kruger from KDAL who has been pushing blood donations throughout the city. The student to whom much of the credit should be given for the success of the Blood Convocation and the drive itself is Jim Dow, former president of Gamma Theta Phi.

The surprise convocation was held the last week of fall quarter and was well attended by the student body. The program consisted of Bill Kruger reading a newscast which switched over to a Korean USO scene. Wounded Korean soldiers were being entertained while they spent Christmas in a hospital. The scene then shifted to a Korean battle movie which was very effective in putting across the need for blood in Korea. After several Korean battle scenes had been given, Bill Kruger made his final plea for blood.

The pledges received from this convocation, plus those from ROTC started the ball rolling. First thing this quarter all the campus organizations were attended by members of Gamma Theta Phi in order to secure more pledges. This final sustained drive brought the number of pledged pints of blood to the present 450.

The whole blood which is now pledged is much more useful than plasma when given to a wounded soldier. This blood will be processed and then flown to Korea as soon as the drive is completed.

The names of the pledges are on file with the fraternity. As soon as arrangements can be made for a mobile unit to reach the campus, those who have pledged their blood will be notified as to the time and place for donating blood.

The Gamma Theta Phi wishes to congratulate the ROTC, the campus organizations and the rest of the student body for their co-operation and willingness to donate their blood for the men in Korea. Congratulations are in order, too, for the fine spirit displayed by all in making this campaign a great success.

Report from Your

by BOB LEESTAMPER

During Fall quarter a Constitutional committee was appointed to study our present constitution. Because there has been no revision of the constitution since 1947, their chief duty was to decide if the present constitution was adequate for our university.

After studying the Campus Plan for 1970, I realized that we must have a Council that is flexible enough to move with our university as it progresses towards completion. With this in mind, I decided to ask the support of the Council in studying the constitution and changing the articles that were no longer effective. I feel that it is very important that it is changed in such a manner as to make it more workable for the students and the university in the years to come.

The Council is assuming that our university will grow both in its physical capacity and in the number of students enrolled. You will have faith in this assumption if you are aware of the tremendous changes that are scheduled for UMD. Also, it takes very little foresight to realize the potential to which our university may rise.

Considering these factors, you can judge the importance of having a student governing organization which has the ability to move forward as its parent unit progresses.

Next week I will comment on the suggestions made by the Constitutional committee at the last meeting.

that death or life under Nazism would be preferable to life under the Russians. Thirty thousand Estonians escaped in small boats to Sweden, and half that many again were killed attempting to get away.

Others left with the German army. Paul, who managed to board a ship for Germany just before the Russians arrived, was among the latter. Along with thousands of other refugees he was conscripted for forced labor on a German farm and later in a factory for the duration of the war.

After the war ended Paul was placed in a DP camp where he remained for 4½ years. According to Paul, "Life in the displaced persons camp was rather degenerating—the food wasn't too good and the quarters were cramped—but I did manage to complete two years of gymnasium (roughly the European equivalent of junior college)."

Finally, in 1949 Paul was notified that after careful screening of applicants he had been accepted as one of the select few to be admitted as immigrants to the United States. His reason for coming to Duluth was that he had some friends, former Estonians, here.

Paul, who is 23, will graduate from UMD next fall. Physical education is his major and math his minor. He also finds time to carry a full-time job at the boys' "Y" and to hold down a berth on the ski team on the side.

"MY GUN IS THE JURY"

By MICKEY SPILLBLOOD

CHAPTER ONE—"ZELDA"

MY NAME IS IKE HATCHET. I'm what you'd call an Exclusive Optic, if you had a college education. The people I know call me a private eye.

When I was twelve, I had an experience. The kid next door called me a dirty name. I grabbed his arm and twisted it behind his back until I heard a sickening snap. My old man heard about it and started to give me a licking. I let the old rat have it with a bottle of Heinz ketchup and stood there watching the red stuff drip from his face and chest. Then I kicked my old lady in the face and took off.

I've always been that way. Sort of quick-tempered and impulsive.

Then came the war. I joined the Marines and they sent me to the South Pacific. It was rough. Wake Island, Tarawa, Anzio, Salerno, Okinawa, the Bulge. They kept shifting me back and forth between theaters wherever they needed me most. My hands were all calloused from the notches on my rifle.

After it was over, I had my ribbons woven into a smoking jacket and traded my CMH for a private operator's license. I kept my .45.

That was five years ago. I've worn out six .45's since then, and tied the knot on 75 cases.

Three years ago I met Zelda. Her last name was Zyzzogeton. She was really the last word. Tall, blonde, and luscious. Million-dollar face. Billion-dollar legs. Her trillion-dollar asset was her personality.

She was the most beautiful girl I had ever seen and she was nuts about me.

Zelda is what you'd call my secretary. She's got brains and can type. Besides that, she's a dead shot and carries two .38's, one under each armpit. She's the only girl I know with two .38's under one sweater.

Zelda would give her eye teeth to land me. She probably will, too. Land me, that is. She couldn't give her eye teeth. I knocked them out in a fight two years ago.

She's the best assistant a guy could ask for, but she's awfully jealous. If I show up at the office with lipstick on my shirt, she lets fly at me with one of her .38's. It's nerve-wracking.

So that's my set-up, and that's the way things were in June of 1951, just before I started the case that turned out to be my toughest, and almost my last.

It all started with a telephone call from Mat Crandall down at homicide

TOO MUCH BULL-dog

It seems as though the Bulldog basketball team is doomed to end the season in, or near the bottom of the MIAC heap. Thus far Joe Gerlach's squad has won but three of 16 games and has lost six of seven in the conference.

Personally, we expected the Bulldogs to have a fairly good season.

Boasting such outstanding high school stars of last season as Esko's Mel Koivisto, Proctor's Wayne Johansen, Cloquet's Bob Bromme and Duluth Central's Chuck Hill, we thought and hoped that Gerlach would turn out a good team.

Many, including yours truly, thought that the above plus returning stalwarts Bruce Paulson, John McKeag, Jim Anderson, Ken Johnson and Norm Schroeder would give Joe a team that should win its share of ball games.

Despite this array of talent, although they are comparatively inexperienced, Gerlach's Bulldogs have not won their share of games.

At least we don't think three wins in 16 games is their rightful share.

SORRY

We have been informed that we omitted a few prominent names in the ski team story of last issue. Those who were omitted from the story as well as from the 3-column picture were Lew Ely, Harry Brusell, Lew Ely, John Johnson and Lew Ely.

Sorry, Lew.

Bulldogs Face Huskies In Return Encounter

Next Wednesday the Bulldog pucksters take to the road again to play St. Cloud on the latter's home ice.

In their first encounter at the Duluth Curling club, the Branchmen eked out a close 5-4 win. Although Coach Gordy Eddolls' puck chasers have lost several games since then, they have made rapid strides toward making the team a smooth functioning unit.

If the forward wall of Wally Heikkinen, Joe Kolar and Bob Juneo can keep up their scoring pace, the Branchmen should notch up their second victory of the hockey season.

Two Cage Tilts On Tap

Basketeers Meet Macs, 'Jackets

By RON JACOTT

Two games are on tap for Coach Joe Gerlach's cagers in the next four days. Tomorrow the Bulldogs journey to St. Paul for a game with Macalester and next Tuesday they will meet the Superior State Yellowjackets on the Superior floor.

In facing the Macs, the Bulldogs will be looking for their second conference win in eight games.

In comparing the two teams, St. Olaf, the only common opponent, took the measure of the Macs in a close contest while the Branchmen defeated the Ole's last week.

Getting onto the Superior game, the Yellowjackets downed the Bulldogs, 87-79, two weeks ago in the National Guard Armory.

One of the big reasons was the play of Superior's freshman center, Bones Hulmer, who was declared eligible at the beginning of the new semester.

Jim Whittier and Pug Polglase were also big factors in Superior's victory, and these three fellows, along with Dixie Walker, will have to be watched closely if the Bulldogs expect a victory.

Golden Gusties Down Branch

The Golden Gusties of Gustavus Adolphus recorded the highest score ever racked up against a Bulldog basketball team last Saturday, subduing the Branchmen, 90-70, in the Duluth Armory.

Led by Guard Red Rehwaldt and 6' 8" pivotman Ed Huse, the second-place Gusties handed the Duluth branch its sixth straight MIAC defeat.

Rehwaldt, in tallying 17 points, and Huse with 24 counters enabled the victors to keep within a full game of league-leading Hamline.

Jumping Jim Anderson again drove hard, potting 23 points on seven field goals and nine of 11 free throws. Bruce Paulson and Chuck Hill scored 15 and 11, respectively, for the beaten Bulldogs.

The Duluth squad missed but nine of 35 gift shots. They trailed at half-time by an 11-point spread, 45-34. By the start of the final stanza, the GA men held an 18-point advantage.

All students interested in participating in a Broomball tournament, Feb. 22, please sign up on the gym bulletin board before Feb. 11.

INTRAMURAL NEWS

By BUDDY LAMPPA

Intramural sports have been in full swing this week, with most of the action coming in basketball and bowling.

The three cage leagues have seen a lot of close competition. The games are held every Thursday afternoon and evening in the UMD gym.

In league one, the Shysters took undisputed possession of first place in the standings, by downing the Parasites, 44-38.

League two found Marty Stepan's powerful Lakers rolling over all competition to lead their league. They displayed some good form in trouncing the Tramps by a score of 43-25. They played this game without the services of big John Stepan. However, his absence meant little for the Lakers in loss of height as the team still averaged far above 6 feet.

The Unknowns hold first place in the third league, with a 2-0 record. They remained inactive last week while the four other teams in the league battled it out in two exciting games. UMD Christian Fellowship lost to Beta Phi Kappa, 22-17. The Schmutzigs got their first win by downing Gamma Theta Phi, 23-17, in another hard fought affair.

The standings in Intramural bowling has last year's champions Klo-Kay deadlocked with Peterson's, both sporting a 6-0 record. Credit for the highest score in three games goes to Swanson who totaled 595. However, the highest score in a single game came when Klo-Kay's Arne Moilanen hit 213.

J. Paul Sheedy* Switched to Wildroot Cream-Oil Because He Flunked The Finger-Nail Test

POOR PAUL was having a fowl time. Even his best gal didn't give a hoot for him. "Wise she hate me so?" he asked his roommate. "Simple, you stuffy old bird—because your hair's always ruffled up! Better try Wildroot Cream-Oil hair tonic. It's non-alcoholic. Contains soothing Lanolin. And does tree things: Relieves annoying dryness. Removes loose, ugly dandruff. Grooms hair neatly and naturally all day long. (Even limbers up your scalp. And helps you pass the Finger-Nail Test!) Paul got Wildroot Cream-Oil and now he's a 'owling success. So why don't you take a taxi-dermist to any drug or toilet goods counter to get a bottle or tube of Wildroot Cream-Oil. It's your hair's best friend! And ask for it at your barber shop. Then there's no talon how the chicks'll go for you.

Hockey Team Loses To Macalester Sextet

By DWAIN GANYO

Gordy Eddoll's young Bulldog sextet's scoring punch finally crystallized in the series last week-end with Macalester even though losing by 5-4 and 7-6 in the Williams Arena in Minneapolis.

Coach Eddoll's early season quote, "We've a young team, but we'll be up there by the end of the season," has proven to be prophetic. His pucksters weren't given a chance by dopesters with this Macalester six which had beaten St. John's by two goals and carried St. Thomas into overtime. Up until the Mac series the Bulldogs had averaged only two goals a game; they made five a game against Macalester.

The first game was a close, well matched affair, first one and then the other side being ahead until Macalester poked in the winning goal late in the third period. Freshman Bob Juneo continued his St. Thomas scoring rash with two more goals.

The second game was all UMD until late in the second period; they had a 5-1 lead once and still led, 6-4 in the third period. Then the Mac's Beisswanger got three goals in four minutes and a total of four for the game. Eddoll's pulled goalie Mendish off the ice in the last hectic seconds in an effort to score; his team responded with a fullisade of shots which bounced off the corner posts, goalie pads and goalie but they just couldn't dent the twine for the tying goal.

Hoopsters Break Loop Losing Skein

In a desperate attempt to get out of the MIAC cellar, the Bulldogs outshot a not-too-impressive St. Olaf quintet, 78-72, last Tuesday at the loser's stronghold.

With Forward Mel Koivisto leading the way with a sizzling 24-point total, the Branchmen ended a 7-game losing streak, six of which had been conference games.

Soph star Bruce Paulson contributed 19 counters and Guard Chuck Hill added 17 as the hot-shooting UMD-men won their third game of the season as compared to 13 defeats.

Center Noel Olson scored 31 points for the Oles, who now have a conference mark of one win and five losses as compared to the Bulldogs' loop record of 1-6.

UMD led at all points, holding a 44-34 advantage at half-time. By the end of the third quarter, Olson and his Ole's narrowed the gap to 58-49.

Calling All Coeds

By LOIS CONRAD

Now is the time of year when every girl's wardrobe needs a good pepping up. It is the time to make smart cottons which can be worn under heavy winter coats and also during the traditional cotton months of the spring and summer.

Wide cotton skirts of licorice and white plaids, checks, or stripes are wonderful when teamed up with a crisp white blouse and a bright red carnation or a gay little yellow jonquil. A full crinoline beneath helps to avoid the droopy look.

Incidentally, a billowy skirt of this sort in one of the more exotic Indian prints with either a matching or contrasting blouse and a wide belt would make a wonderful outfit for the Sno-Week square dance.

By making your own clothes you can have twice as many things which are exclusively yours. All you have to do is to decide what you need and would like to make. Choose one of this spring's exciting fashions, and pick a fabric—preferably cotton—that expresses your personality and individuality.

You can add perky little pique weskits, sleeveless blouses, duster coats, and accessories to your already existing wardrobes out of cotton fabrics whose variety is simply unlimited.

Make a pair of gloves, a plaid pleated cockade, a brilliant print tie, or a soft fluffy chiffon scarf to show off your more basic suits and separates. All you need is a little ingenuity and a bit of practice to perfect your own talent.

There's just no end to the many possibilities which this spring's styles bring to us and together with our own designing, we can add, take away, or modify the existing patterns and designs to suit our own individual tastes.
